Advice for trade

- Purchase festive foods and ingredients from reputable suppliers. Do not buy food from unknown sources.
- Wrap festive foods and ingredients properly, and store at appropriate temperatures.
- Check all the raw materials before using. Discard any raw materials that have deteriorated or having unusual appearance/smell.
- Keep all the purchase and sale records for source-tracing when necessary.
- Do not purchase or sell any food products if there is any doubt about its hygiene and safety.

Advice for consumers

- Buy Lunar New Year foods from reputable and hygiene stores.
- When buying pre-packaged products, make sure the packages are intact and mind the expiry dates.
- When buying non-packaged products such as sweetened lotus seed, nuts and melon seeds, pay attention to hygienic condition of food containers and personal hygiene of staff.
- Choose foods with natural color. Do not purchase foods which look too colorful or too bright as excessive amount of artificial colors or food additives may have been added.
- Before eating, check the food carefully. If abnormal smell or moulds are found, discard the food immediately.
- The public should maintain a balance diet. Especially some Lunar New Year foods are high in calories, fat and sugar. Avoid excessive eating of Lunar New Year foods.
